

Deductions for wheat, durum and barley research

Grain research is essential to maintain Canada's competitive edge in the marketplace.

The Western Grains Research Foundation (WGRF) is the producer-member organization that administers an optional deduction from producer deliveries to fund wheat, durum and barley breeding research.

The levies for wheat, durum and barley are applied against the producer's CWB final payment. Barley is exempt in Alberta because the provincial commission has a check-off program in place.

Producers can opt out annually by providing written notice to the WGRF (address below), which must include their full name, CWB 10-digit producer ID number, crop year, complete address and signature.

Producers will receive an opt-out confirmation letter within 30 days of providing their notice.
